

An associate with Stantec Consulting, Sheila Wray Given is the leader for business development of California major transportation programs. She has more than 20 years experience in public relations, communications, marketing, and business development. In addition to her corporate roles, Wray Given has provided public affairs consulting services to transportation agencies. Her project responsibilities have included development of overall outreach program plans; event consultation and implementation; development and consultation on collateral materials and media programs, as well as communications with federal, state and local officials; and media responses. Wray Given is a strong proponent of proactive and efficient relations between agencies, consultants, contractors and the public in order to ensure success in all areas of a project. She has held various marketing and public relations positions for consultant firms in Southern California, and has worked with numerous public entities throughout the U.S.

Having joined WTS in 1994, Wray Given has served actively and continuously on the WTS Los Angeles Chapter's (WTS-LA) board. Holding positions including chapter president, first vice president and director, Wray Given was part of the team that helped transform WTS-LA into the largest WTS chapter. Honoring her chapter contributions, WTS-LA named Wray Given the 1995 Member of the Year. She also served a previous term as an international director at large from 2002 to 2004 and was involved in the branding and website efforts.

She earned a Bachelor's of Science in journalism with an emphasis on public relations from the University of Iowa.
